THE SUCCOTH FESTIVAL AND THE FEDERATION DRIVE

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

No time could be more propitious for a philanthropic campaign than the present moment. Coming in the wake of the Holy Season and in the very heart of the Succoth celebration, the Annual Jewish Federation Drive in Toronto should be crowned with overwhelming success. In our synagogues this week we lavish praise upon God for His benign providence, for the loving care with which He has tended His people Israel, and for the bounty with which He has blessed them, particularly in this land of freedom and plenty. And how can we demonstrate our gratitude best if it be not by sharing with others the manifold gifts which we enjoy. Mumbled and memorized prayers, lip phrases, perfunctory and passing worship do not suffice. We can display our appreciation for getting only by giving.

And what is more natural than this desire to give a portion of our bounty unto those whose need is greater than our own. Our forefathers, after their long and weary trek through the wilderness, after their bitter struggle to gain possession of the Promised Land, after their tedious travail and toil to wrench from a stubborn soil a bare subsistence, did not greedily and covetously consume the fruit of their labor but rather did they prescribe that the "corners of the fields" and that which dropped in the harvesting, "the fallen fruit and grain", was to be left for the poor, the needy, and the stranger (Lev. 19:9). But even more than this did our grateful and pious forebears ordain. "And when thou art come into the land which the Lord, thy God, giveth thee" reads the command in Deuteronomy (26:1 ff) "Thou shalt take the first of all the produce of the ground and thou shalt bring it unto the Temple . . . and thou shalt say . . ." (because) the Lord hath given us this land, flowing with milk and honey, behold I have brought the first fruit of the land which Thou, O Lord, hast given me.' And thou shalt rejoice in the bounty which God hath given thee . . . and a tithe of all thy products thou shalt give unto the stranger, to the fatherless and to the widow, that they may eat within thy gates and be satisfied."

What a noble bit of social legislation this is, and how puny seem our gifts in comparison with those of our ancestors. They offered their "Bikurim," their first fruits, the very finest and best that they possessed. The first luscious grapes, the finest stalks of corn, the best of their cattle. We give the residue, the little mite, the infinitesimal fraction that is left after we have satiated ourselves with comforts and luxuries and extravagances unnumbered. They gave a tenth of all their possessions, and we? . . . outside of a few most liberal givers, who among us even approximates their generosity and their heartfelt solicitude for the less fortunate and the downtrodden?

At this annual Succoth Season might it not be a happy thought to give to our Annual Federation Campaign our "first fruits" likewise,—the "first fruits" of our income,—not to wait until the fiscal years rolls round and the inventory be taken, not to see how little we can spare after every whim and caprice and fancy has been indulgently fulfilled, but to devote at the outset, wholeheartedly and generously, a goodly share of the bounty with which we have been singularly blessed to the handicapped and the helpless.

At the very moment that I am writing this plea for a greater and a more munificent gift to the Federation and, through this splendid organization, to the needy of our community, the whole world is uniting to pay due homage and honor to one of its greatest benefactors, Thomas Alva Edison. Celebrities from every nation are uniting to render their respects to him who, through his untiring efforts and ceaseless sacrifice of self, has illumined and rendered more radiant the lives and hearts of all men. We cannot all be Edisons nor can we all gain the applause and approbation of the whole of civilization. But in our own little corner, in our own little sphere of life we can bring a ray of light to those who dwell in darkness, cheer to the downcast, food to the hungry, clothes to the naked, hope to the despondent, faith to the fallen, and joy to those who have 'lost their way in this world.' And if thus we do, although our names may not be blazened forth in flashing letters of flame, as was Edison's this day, our memories will be enshrined in the hearts of those whom we have helped and the gladness which we have gained by giving will be our happiest reward. To the Jewish Federation of Toronto let us, this year, give our "first fruits" our finest and our best; let us give generously, bountifully, and gladly.

Marriages

Rother-Goldman

The marriage was solemnized Thursday afternoon at half past five o'clock, in the Blue Room of the Windsor Hotel, of Miss Faria Goldman, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. I. Goldman to Abraham Rother, son of the late G. Rother and of Mrs. Rother. Rabbi H. Abramowitz officiated, assisted by Rev. Segal and Mr. Dubitsky. The room was decorated in autumn tones, shading from yellow to bronze, with quantities of palms and ferns. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore oyster white bridal satin, made in princess lines with a fitted bodice, the high waist being marked by a gathered girdle, finishing in a flat bow at the back. The skirt, reaching to the ground, gathered fullness from fan shaped godets which extended in the back to form the long train. Long tight sleeves fell over her hands in points. Her veil of Bruges lace was arranged in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms across the back. She wore white crepe shoes, with fan shaped ornaments of Chantilly lace and orange blossoms, and carried an arm bouquet of Easter lilies and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. S. Goldman, as matron of honour, gowned in a champagne moiré dress, very long in back with same velvet pocktail jacket of the same shade. She wore a small draped hat of velvet to match her jacket. The bridesmaids, Miss Florence Jacobs and Miss Ida Persky were gowned alike in bronze moiré made on similar lines as those of the matron of honor, with panne velvet jackets, hats and shoes to match. The matron of honor carried bronze chrysanthemums and the bridesmaids yellow and bronze pompoms. Lehn Persky was flower girl in yellow taffeta. She wore a yellow tulle poke bonnet with small bronze feathers on one side and long bronze velvet streamers, carrying a yellow and bronze colonial bouquet. Mrs. Goldman, mother of the bride, was gowned in black lace, with hat of black felt with inserts of stiffened lace and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses. Mrs. Rother, mother of the groom, was gowned in black lace with a lace jacket to match and a soft bow falling down the back; with hat of panne velvet with ostrich plumes and she carried a bouquet of red roses. The groom was attended by his cousin, S. Rother, as best man. The ushers were Dr. S. Goldman, N. B. Cohen, J. L. Mailman and Vincent Rother. Mr. and Mrs. Rother sailed by the Duchess of Richmond for Europe. Going away the bride wore a brown and tan crepe dress, a tan coat trimmed in natural lynx. Her hat was made of tan soleil velour, with a short veil. She wore brown python shoes and carried a bag to match.

Vineberg-Bronfman

At Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Kensington avenue, Westmount, October 15 at six o'clock, Miss Zella Bronfman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bronfman, was married to Dr. Norman Vineberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Vineberg. Masses of green southern smilax and one-time yellow chrysanthemums were arranged in the synagogue. Rabbi H. Abramowitz officiated at the ceremony assisted by Rev. Segal and Mr. Cohen. F. H. Blair played the wedding music.

The bridal procession to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, led by Stanley Vineberg, the best man, Dr. Vineberg and his mother, Rose Vineberg, brother of the groom, accompanied by Mrs. A. Bronfman, the bridesmaids, Misses Lillian Rosminsky, Delia Stein, Mildred Bronfman, Hazel Bloomstone, the groomsmen, Archie Rittenberg, Herschel Samit, Saul Vineberg, Lawrence Cohen, Dr. Harry Gliekman, the maid of honor, Miss Rona Bronfman, and the flower girl, Ruth Bronfman, passed under an arched bower of smilax and chrysanthemums.

The bride was given away by her father, and wore ivory satin made in princess lines with bands of the material encircling the bodice and forming the long train. A V-shaped neck of Alencon lace formed a deep U line at the back, and was encrusted in the satin. The skirt on circular lines was very full, and extended to the floor all around. Long tight sleeves, and a bell-shaped incrustation of Alencon lace from the elbow over the hands completed the bodice. The veil, in cap effect, formed two wide pleated ruffles falling over the nape of the neck from which fell long folds of the tulle extending to the train. The cap was held by a satin's bow under her chin. A bouquet of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley was carried. The bridesmaids were dresses of crepe de soir, shading from deep dahlia to pale mauve. Their hats, made of chiffon, narrow in front and extending at the back, harmonized with their gowns. They carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Mrs. A. Bronfman, the bride's mother, wore brocade Francis in tones of gold chartreuse and oeillet. Her hat was a model of chartreuse velvet with tete de negre aigrettes. She carried an armbouquet of deep pink roses. Mrs. M. Vineberg, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in black lace, with a black lace hat and a corsage bouquet of red roses. Supper for six hundred guests was served in the Palais of the Mount Royal Hotel, and dancing took place in the ball-room. Dr. and Mrs. Vineberg left by the Lady Hawkins from Halifax for a six weeks' cruise to the West Indies. They will live in Westmount. The bride wore for travelling an ensemble of sand tweed trimmed with caracul, black suede shoes, a black felt hat and bag to match.

ISLANDS OF ROMANCE

What a vista of delightful recollections the very name West Indies opens up. From early youth we have read of them, on the pages of Treasure Island, on the pages of history. Here Britain made her first great bid for Empire. Here Drake and Hawkins and the Buccaneer Morgan humbled the pride of haughty Spain.

Canada is now linked with these lovely islands by direct steamship service maintained by a splendid fleet of yacht-like tropic travel vessels.

Two services are maintained. The Eastern Group Service embraces coral Bermuda, St. Kitts, Nevis, Antigua, Montserrat, Dominica, St. Lucia, Barbados, St. Vincent, Grenada and Georgetown, British Guiana.

The Western Group Service sails to Bermuda, The Bahamas and Kingston, Jamaica where connection is made for Belize, British Honduras.

Full particulars may be obtained from any Canadian National rail or steamship agent.

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The declaration of a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the stock of Famous Players means that the issue has been placed on a basis of $2 a share. This the initial disbursement on the stock is along the lines of what had been generally anticipated by the market. There is no indication at this early juncture to warrant the dividend rate to $3 a year.

No Apparent Fear of Civic Competition for "Power"

A feature of the recent action on the stock market of Montreal Power Stock is the apparent lack of concern on the part of buyers over the announcement that the Montreal City Council have definitely decided to go ahead with their plans to establish its own power plant to take care of street and public park lighting. This failure on the part of the market to reflect what is apparently an unfavorable development in connection with the company's operations is explained, herewith, by the fact that, in quarters close to the situation the opinion is expressed that the proposed civic scheme presents so many serious problems, that it will be some considerable time before such a development could be carried out if it ever is. It is thought likely that when the promoters of the enterprise have studied all the details, it will be found there is a good deal more to it than appears at first glance. In the first place, it is understood that it would mean the replacement of over 40,000 poles now in use by the Power Company in furnishing service to the city. Besides, in order to adequately handle the supply of power to all parts of such a large municipality as Montreal there would have to be erected in different locations a large number of sub-stations to relay power to outlying sections. This would necessitate the expenditure of a large amount of money, in addition to the investment in the power plant it is proposed to erect at the Lachine intake.

Another factor that would enter into the situation would be the need of a constant supply of power, especially during the winter months. According to the plans said to be under consideration it is expected to develop 25,000 horsepower at the proposed plant. In the opinion of power experts it would be a very difficult proposition to obtain this amount in the winter, owing to ice conditions. They express the view that it would hardly be possible to develop more than 5,000 horsepower.

With these and other considerations entering into the situation, the general disposition is to feel that competition by the city is a remote possibility and to regard the announcement in the light of a political gesture.

ASBESTOS CORP.

It is stated by interests close to the company that no capital reorganization for Asbestos Corporation will be necessary, this in the light of the healthy financial position which is sufficiently strong to meet the requirements of the big development program now underway.

NORANDA

Directors of Noranda Mines, following a meeting last week, announced their decision to pay a dividend on the stock before the end of the current year. From Rouyn comes the report that Amulet drills have again struck ore. No details are available but are expected shortly. The ore is stated to be high grade.

LAKE SHORE

Further details of the reported strike on the 2,000-foot level of the Lake Shore were contained in wires from Kirkland Lake. The vein is said to be of good width and contains about 20 inches of almost solid free gold. The drift on this is said to have advanced approximately 3 00 feet.

The Rise of David Levinsky

A Novel by Abraham Cahan

By arrangement with HARPER and BROTHERS, Copyright.

"Take pity on your hard-earned pennies, Levinsky," he would say. "Else you'll wake up some day like the fellow who has dreamed he has found a treasure. He's holding on to the treasure tight, and when he opens his eyes he finds it's nothing but a handful of wind."

"I'll tell you what, Levinsky," he began on one occasion. "You ought to see some of those magician fellows."

"What for?" I asked.

"Did you ever see them at their game? They'll put an egg into a hat; say, 'One, two, three,' and pull out a chicken. And they say, 'One, two, three,' again and there's neither a chicken nor an egg. That's the way all this real-estate will end. Mark my word, Levinsky."

Bender nagged and pleaded with me without let-up. If I had had the remotest doubt of his devotion to me it would have been dispelled now. I was at my great mahogany desk every morning, as usual, but I seldom stayed more than two hours, and even during those two hours my mind was divided between cloaks and real estate or between cloaks and Anna. Bender was practically in full charge of the business. Instead, however, of welcoming the power it gave him, he made unrelenting efforts to restore things to their former state. He was constantly haranguing me on the risks I was incurring, beseeching me to drop my new ventures, and threatening to leave me unless I did so. Once, as he was thus expostulating with me, he broke down.

"I appeal to you as your friend, as your old-time teacher," he said, and burst into tears.

If it had not been for him I should have neglected my cloak business beyond repair. He handled me as a gambler's wife does her husband. He would seek me out in front of some unfinished building, at Tevkin's, or at some "bhoom" café, and make me sign some checks, consult me on something or other, or wheedle me into accompanying him to my factory for an hour or two. But the next day he would have to go hunting for me again.

I had invested considerable money in my new affairs, and releasing it at short notice would not have been an easy matter. But the great point was that I was literally intoxicated by my new interests, and the fact that they were intimately associated with the atmosphere of Anna's home had much—perhaps everything—to do with it.

I loved her to insanity. She was the supreme desire of my being. I knew that she was weaker in character and mind than Elsie, for example, but that seemed to be a point in her favor rather than against her. "She is a good girl," I would argue, "mild, kindly, girlish. As for her 'radical' notions, they really don't matter much. I could easily knock them out of her. I should be happy with her. Oh, how happy!"

And, in spite of the fact that I thought her weak, the sight of her would fill me with awe.

One's first love is said to be the most passionate love of which one is capable. I do not think it is. I think my feeling for Anna was stronger, deeper, more tender, and more overpowering than either of my previous two infatuations. But then, of course, there is no way of measuring and com-

Every Friday

Your attention is being called to the campaign for $150,000 which the Toronto Federation of Jewish Philanthropies will hold from October 28 to 31st. There is nothing spectacular about it. It comes every year and every year Federation asks you for more money. The Federation is full of hard luck stories, it is the Toronto Jewish clearing house for hard luck stories. All the troubles of all your friends and relatives are duplicated in Federation case records. Federation is the communal expert in zoras. It always needs money.

In order to acquaint you with the sorrows of the poor and get you to alleviate their burdens an elaborate organization must still be built up. You are told about the eternal pride of the Jews in taking care of their own poor. You hear of the work Federation does every day in the year in easing the miseries of the poor, the sick, the old, the helpless and the weary who live in broken homes. Now, Federation in Toronto is growing stronger with each year. It is an established institution, its work is respected. Its executive is your representative to the poor. It can be trusted to spend your money for you according to modern ideas of understanding and efficiency in philanthropic work. These are facts that should be taken for granted by now by Jews everywhere with regard to their Federations. The more progressive the community the more is Federation regarded as a vital fixture.

Since the poor are always with you and since budgets must increase as necessary programs expand, you will be expected to contribute every year. The workers who ask you to contribute are not asking for themselves, naturally. Even if they were they could expect certain consideration. However, since they are begging of you to help the unfortunate others they are specialist schnorrers. Bear in mind that they are taking time from their own work and affairs to interest themselves in the troubles of the underdogs of this prosperous life. They are friends or acquaintances of yours living in the same community with you. They are not salesmen trying to unload something useless on you. They are citizens who have undertaken to expedite your duty for you.

Don't gum up campaign machinery by forcing the workers to sell you the idea of giving your share to charity through the Federation. It is too late in the day for that. If campaign workers are not unwelcome salesmen of some sort or other they are also not entertainers or leaders in debate on the subject of the place of charity in the present-day community. They are collectors of money for a noble purpose. Get rid of them with dispatch and courtesy by giving what you can. Few people do give what they can. It will make you distinguished, therefore. It should be more than easy for Toronto Jews to produce $150,000 for Federation. Every one believes in giving to charity. The cry for help is so old. The impulse to answer it is always new.

No eulogies were pronounced over Louis Marshall who died recently in Zurich. His funeral, marked by simplicity, was an example. Lesser men need eloquent speeches and flattering words spoken over them even in death. Louis Marshall's life and conduct spoke for him. He left an estate estimated at $5,000,000. He provided that one tenth of his personal estate was to be divided into twenty equal parts to be placed in trust in various proportions for various institutions, namely, the Jewish Theological Seminary, the Jewish Protectory and Aid Society, the Jewish Welfare Board, Mount Sinai Hospital, Beth Israel Hospital, Montefiore Home for Chronic Invalids, Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, Marshall Memorial Home, in Syracuse, N.Y., Jewish Orphan Asylum of Western New York, Jewish Publication Society, Hebrew Union College and Syracuse University. Nothing that was human was foreign to Louis Marshall. Whites and blacks, all kinds of Jews and all of kinds of Gentiles attended his funeral in a feeble attempt to pay silent tribute to a man above and beyond eulogy or the desire for it. He had brought a great deal to life and he had lived happily and richly a full, crowded span of years. He might well have said with George Bernard Shaw: "I am of the opinion that my life belongs to the whole community, and as long as I live, it is my privilege to do for it whatever I can. I want to be thoroughly used up when I die, for the harder I work, the harder I live. I rejoice in life for its own sake. Life is no brief candle to me. It is a sort of splendid torch, which I have got hold of for the moment and I want to make it burn as brightly as possible before handing it on to future generations."

Here's the way to order MILK.

[illegible] just order a pint of milk — for each of the [illegible] a quart of milk. That may be many times the quantity you are buying now, but it's not extravagant. Milk supplies all the nourishment that more expensive foods provide. Just ask your doctor what he thinks about this.

What is it we should buy?

"Ever meet with 'clean reek'?"

Yes, an opened bundle of family wash from this soft water laundry fairly reeks of fresh, crispy cleanliness. Housewives who care, appreciate keenly the weekly pleasure of receiving the parcel and sorting it out. Our methods are just as simple as soft water, pure soap, and many rinsings, but — and here's the big point - by laboratory research we know for certain that the water is soft and the soap pure. Each wash is done separately, and without any marking or starching. Phone today and let us tell you of our five different services, or ask any one of our courteous drivers.

The American bullfighter, Sidney Franklin, making his third appearance in Madrid, met with fair success when he displayed daring and coolness in the ring. The Brooklyn youth made excellent passes with the Cape Muleta, handling the first bull skillfully and winning much applause when he killed it with his fourth thrust. Franklin worked cautiously with the second bull—a wild and dangerous animal—and drew upon himself the displeasure of the audience. He manoeuvred carefully and killed the animal with three thrusts.

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

THE FUTURE OF ORTHODOXY?

"Unless the Orthodox Synagogue becomes more liberal, there is no future for that Synagogue in America". Thus spoke Rabbi Schwefel, an alumnus of the Jewish Theological Seminary, to his Orthodox Congregation in Washington, D.C., on Yom Kippur Eve.

Now this pronouncement does not contain anything that is startling. Perhaps the only factor to be made note of in the episode is that Rabbi Schwefel must possess courage. It does take a certain amount of intellectual honesty to speak one's mind so frankly.

I personally hope that the day will never come when Orthodoxy in the strict sense of the term shall be no more. Certainly the source of supply for Liberal Judaism is the Orthodox Synagogue. I want to see Orthodoxy flourish. A sincere, strict Orthodox Judaism has a place even in America. It answers a great spiritual quest for thousands of Jews. And what could be finer in Jewish life than an Orthodoxy with its reverent and poetic observances!

But the moment an Orthodox congregation begins to tinker with the traditional ritual and introduces compromises, that organization has no future. It is doomed! The only safety valve is Reform Judaism. Half measures and so-called progressive reforms under the guise of Orthodoxy create loop holes for inconsistencies and endanger one's most priceless possession—honesty of the intellect.

And what a humorous spectacle the Orthodox Congregations who flirt with reform represent! Look around the land! Look at the chaotic conditions. Some such congregations have abolished the finest of institutions of Orthodoxy. They have introduced prayers in the vernacular. Others have even succeeded in bringing the organ through the back door. And still they label themselves as Orthodox. What a shock Joseph Caro, the author of the "Shulchan Aruch", would receive were he to see the shuls that are mis-named Reform! I do believe Orthodoxy in America has a future. Orthodoxy but not "Paradoxy". Reform and Orthodoxy which compromise with "the words of the living God" even violate the basic principle underlying the schools of Shamai and Hillel.

ALFRED M. COHEN

Our many friends will gather next Thursday to honor a distinguished leader in the person of Alfred M. Cohen. Those in touch with Jewish organizations the world over know full well the name of Mr. Cohen. However, to those readers Mr. Cohen is known as the President of the International Order of the Bne Brith and the President of the Board of Governors of the Hebrew Union College. But to those of us who had the privilege of attending the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati Alfred is best known as a friend. He is a man who ever "befriended the boys". And the boys—now graduates of the Hebrew Union—scattered to the corners of the globe—extend greetings to Alfred M. on his seventieth birthday, to our honour share.

THE RABBI OF TODAY

From a sermon preached by Rabbi Harry J. Stern

[illegible] the Rabbi was [illegible]—he was [illegible]. And the rabbi's tasks were very [illegible] and limited. The rabbi of old was chiefly a scholar—a teacher—a living example of his flock. Today the rabbi is all things to everybody.

paring things of this kind. Anna was the first virgin I had ever loved. Was that responsible for the particular depth of my feeling?

"Oh, I must have her or I'll fall to pieces," I would say to myself, yearning and groaning and whining like a lunatic.

My gambling mania was really the aberration of a love maddened brain. How could Bender or Nodelman understand it?

I found myself in the midst of other lunatics, of men who had simply been knocked out of balance by the suddenness of their gains. My money had come slowly and through work and worry. Theirs had dropped from the sky. So they could scarcely believe their senses that it was not all a dream. They were hysterical with gleeful amusement; they were in a delirium of ecstasy over themselves; and at the same time they looked as though they were tempted to feel their own faces and hands to make sure that they were real.

One evening I saw a man whose family was still living on fifteen dollars a week lose more than six hundred dollars in poker and then take a group of congenial spirits out for a spree that cost him a few hundred dollars more. One man in this party, who was said to be worth three quarters of a million, had only recently worked as a common bricklayer. He is fixed in my memory by his struggles to live up to his new position, more especially by the efforts he would make to break himself of certain habits of speech. He always seemed to be on his guard lest some coarse word or phrase should escape him, and when a foul expression eluded his vigilance he would give a start, as if he had broken something. There was often a wistful look in his eye, as if he wondered whether his wealth and new mode of living were not merely a cruel practical joke. Or was he yearning for the simpler and more natural life which he had led until two years ago? We had many an expensive meal together, and often, as he ate, he would say:

He is supposed to be a scholar in Jewish thought as well as secular learning. He must know the literatures of old and is expected to have read the latest books of fiction. He is an ambassador to the non-Jewish community, and a worker within the Jewish community. And certainly he is supposed to be a pastor he is expected to visit with the members of his congregation. People also want the rabbi to be an orator. And alas, many rabbis, due to the demands of congregants, have become mere orators . . . and what tragedy! Very often the modern rabbi is expected by the Board of Trustees to be a financier who is to wipe out the mortgages of temples, and plan new structures. You can readily see that the imminent duties of present day rabbinical leadership are so onerous and numerous that the rabbi is deprived of time and leisure for study. Thus the rabbi is more of the synagogue executive rather than the teacher in Israel. I doubt whether Judaism will be perpetuated by rabbis who are business executives.

The synagogue is not a business. The synagogue is a spiritual force, an institution fashioned for the housing and furtherance of a great ideal which is to help men and women live adequately and happily. And the rabbi as leader of such an institution must be given the time to study all phases of life by which he may further this ideal. Observe the rabbi's average work-day and see whether he is not overtaxed and overburdened
